

Danny Dillan Yari

I have always had a strong interest in IT and problem-solving, and my passion for development – both technical and personal – has grown over time. To explore this passion, I first tried several independent courses in programming, which strengthened my decision to change careers. My drive to continuously develop and learn new things has led me to focus on IT and programming. After working as a chiropractor, where I developed analytical and personalized skills, I have now chosen to pursue my passion for development.
